HASTALARLA ÇALIŞMANIN FAYDALARI

Yağmur
The most important thing I learned in the hospital is communication. That's why I generally communicate with patients with empathy. I think that in order to work better in a hospital, active listening, active speaking, sympathetic approach and effective body language should be used.

Azra
Working with patients allows us to have a more calm and understanding personality, and most importantly, it strengthens the sense of empathy. It is necessary to communicate with patients in a friendly way and understand their problems. The priority should be to calm the patient who is angry or in panic and to reassure him.

Yunus
First of all, hello, I thought it would be difficult to communicate with patients, but I never had any difficulties, I think just knowing how to be polite and listen is enough. I don't think we will have any problems with patients unless you raise the level of sincerity too much. Thanks for listening. have a nice day.

Kübra
To work with patients, we must empathize and be calm. Working with patients improves both our communication skills and our empathy skills. I speak clearly to patients, approach them with a smile and empathize with them, but I take care to keep my distance.

İkbal
The benefits of working with patients are that my social communication between people has improved and at the same time, I have learned to be practical in any job. I communicate with patients by empathizing with them and in a way that they can understand. In my opinion, in order to work well with patients, you need to be cold-blooded and equipped.
